*Chapter 1*: John Phoenix Goes to Outer Wilds

"Prepare for liftoff!" Yuri Cosmos shouted into a megaphone. You may be wondering, how is Yuri Cosmos here if Dual Destinies isn't canon? That my friends is simply because Yuri Cosmos is good.

The spaceship prepared for liftoff, and then it lifted off! With John Phoenix as the pilot of course, and Solomon Starbuck was in there too.

"AWAY WE GO, ON THE MOST IMPORTANT SPACE MISSION IN HISTORYYYYYY!" shouted Yuri Cosmos in the radio. "And involved in it was I, YUUUUUUUUUUUUUURI COSMOOOOOOOOOOOOOOS!"

John Phoenix pretended he said "JOOOOOHN PHOENIIIIIIIX" because he's more important.

"So uh where're we going?" said Starbuck.

"Elementary Starbuck. We are going to discover a new galaxy with intelligent alien life!"

Indeed, such a feat was thought impossible with human technology, and they were right. But John Phoenix didn't need technology. John Phoenix picked a random direction and sped off at a million miles per hour while Yuri Cosmos sang about how great he is in the radio.

After about half a day of searching, John Phoenix halted the spaceship suddenly! Which caused Starbuck to fly off his seat and smack his face against the window. This is why you wear your seatbelt.

"Good heavens! Why'd you stop my dear boy?" said Cosmos.

John Phoenix pointed and there was a little spaceship heading towards them. It slowed until it stopped and a little guy in a spacesuit unlike any astronaut's on Earth and floated toward them. John Phoenix opened the door and the little man came in, and it then removed its helmet to reveal its head. It was a blue creature with pointy ears and four eyes! Actual eyes, not glasses.

"AHHH, AN ALIEN!" shouted Starbuck and he took out his gun. "KILL IT!"

"No." said John Phoenix. "He means us no harm. I know this because I can communicate with it."

"Hi I'm from Timber Hearth," said the little creature in Timber Hearthian which John Phoenix understands. "The sun's going to explode soon and I need to stop it, I know because I'm in a time loop."

"My god, yes! If this new galaxy gets destroyed, how will we ever prove our mission was successful?" said Cosmos.

"Don't worry, I've got a plan," said John Phoenix.

He turned back around and went to head forward but then he noticed there was suddenly a large ball in front of them!

"Who put that moon there?!" said John Phoenix and he turned to his crewmates who were playing cards and they looked up.

"What moon John Phoenix?" said Starbuck. And John Phoenix turned back around. There was indeed no longer a moon there. What a perplexing galaxy this is.

As they continued on to the alien's home planet Timber Hearth, Starbuck had a question for the alien.

"Hey alien how'd you know where to find us anyway?"

The alien picked up a weird gadget.

"I picked up radio waves of some old guy singing billions of miles away!"

"That would be !! Ha ha, once again I am the hero!" said Cosmos.

Anyway they went to Timber Hearth and saw the sun was indeed about to explode so he told the residents to get on his ship to evacuate.

"Haw haw my dear alien, the sun won't explode until it's ten billion years old!" said the museum guy.

"Well it IS ten billion years old! It's literally turned red and expanded, get the hell out of here!" said John Phoenix.

The museum owner fell asleep.

John Phoenix was mad but he couldn't abandon these innocent people because he wanted to be famous, so he returned to the ship.

"My boy, in situations like these we must turn to Cosmos Tech," said Cosmos. "Press that red button and you will be equipped to save these fascinating creatures! And then we can put them all in museums!"

"Okay Cosmos," said John Phoenix.

So John Phoenix blasted off back into space. He looked over at the sun, which you should not do boys and girls, but John Phoenix can because he has special sunproof eyes. The sun was now becoming a smooth orange color and was beginning to contract! The supernova was coming! But John Phoenix was ready.

John Phoenix slammed his fist on the red button and a large claw sprang out of a shaft and attached itself to Timber Hearth, the alien's home planet!

"The sun here may be about to explode, but it's not the only sun out there your planet can orbit around!" said John Phoenix.

And then he shot off into space with the planet in tow.

"John Phoenix look out!" said Starbuck. He pointed forward and John Phoenix saw that wretched moon again, and it was in their way! They were guaranteed to crash into it at this speed!

"Oooogh I can't look!" cried the Timber Hearthian and he covered all of his eyes with his hands and feet! Starbuck curled up into a ball ready to accept his fate of being smashed into a moon!

"John Phoenix I believe in you my lad," said Yuri Cosmos. "I know you can come out on top of this perilous situation!"

John Phoenix squinted. He did not slow down or try to change course, because the exploding sun was pursuing them as he thought. But he knew exactly what to do.

The space ship hurtled toward the moon that was about to smash them up. But then...

John Phoenix blinked.

In that instant, the moon was no longer being observed by anyone and had vanished into the air.

Everyone celebrated John Phoenix genius move and he was proud of himself.

"You really are a hero Mr. Alien," said the Timber Hearthian.

And so John Phoenix brought Timber Heart to his solar system and made it start rotating around their sun on the same orbit and at the same speed as Earth and the Timber Hearthians were finally safe for another few billion years.

The End!
