Chapter 1*: John Phoenix Solves A Puzzle

John Phoenix was in London. He was not here on business, he was here to see the sights.

"Wow John Phoenix look it's Big Ben!" said his uncle.

"Who is Ben and why should I care," said John Phoenix. "I'm only interested in ONE person in all of London (aside from Storm Ryunosuke and all their friends).

"Who's that John Phoenix," said Phoenix and then a man in a top hat approached.

"How delightful to see you again John Phoenix," said Professor Layton.

John Phoenix caught up with his old friend the professor and Phoenix tagged along too!

"My, John Phoenix, I have the most smashing puzzle I thought you'd like to try," said Layton.

Layton gave John Phoenix a picture of a diamond. The sun shone on it through the window. Below was a map showing ten floors and lots of doors.

"A daring thief must invade an unclimbable tower and take off with a priceless diamond on the top floor. What is the fewest number of doors he must pass through in order to achieve this?"

"TAKE THAT! The answer is zero," said John Phoenix.

"I think you're mistaken," said the professor and he took away some picarats. BUT THEN JOHN PHOENIX SNATCHED THEM BACK!

"You failed to specify how tall the tower is! Professor Layton, I think this is a really short tower! That means all the thief has to do is break through the window which is barely above ground!

The professor was shocked. John Phoenix was not. John Phoenix is a smarter man than Professor Layton.

The End!
