Summary: Arsène Lupin issues a challenge to the Great Detective and John Phoenix must help his friends win!

Chapter 1*: Arsène Lupin VS John Phoenix

John Phoenix was in 1900, visiting his friends and family of 221B Baker Street, who were currently living in their own era.

Just then, a letter came through the mailbox. Iris took the letter and gave it to Herlock Sholmes, who read it aloud.

Dear Herlock Sholmes,

It has been some time. I plan to enter your home and steal your possessions.

Your friend, the gentleman thief Arsène Lupin!

Sholmes screamed and collapsed on the floor!

"He's gonna steal my stuff! I can't let him do that!" cried Sholmes.

"Then flush it down the toilet or something so he can't get to it," said John Phoenix.

"A capital idea, my friend!" said Sholmes, and he picked up everything he cared about and carried them to the bathroom.

He dumped everything into the toilet and tried to flush them down, but they got stuck for some reason. Sholmes raised an eyebrow and examined the items that were stuck, and noticed there was already something in there, blocking the way. Then, suddenly, A MAN JUMPED OUT OF THE TOILET WITH ALL OF SHOLMES' POSSESSIONS IN HAND!

"AHA, YOU HAVE FALLEN FOR MY MOST DEVIOUS TRAP!" Lupin declared, and then he punched Sholmes in the face and ran out.

Lupin thought he had bested the Great Detective Herlock Sholmes, but he had forgotten to account for a greater enemy. The second he ran out the door, Susato appeared out of nowhere and tossed him away!

Lupin flew across the room towards Ryunosuke, who was at the other end of the room with his sword out in a way that would cut Lupin in half, but Lupin had come to his senses and activated Sholmes' fly-stopping machine which stops him from flying through the air.

However, John Phoenix knew he would do this, which was why before it got stolen he had Iris install a thief scanner, which tested if the fingerprints of the user belonged to Sholmes, Iris, Ryunosuke, Susato or John Phoenix. As Lupin does not have any of their fingerprints, he must be a thief, so a big net came out of the device and trapped Lupin in it!

"Good work following my plan everyone," said John Phoenix and he took Sholmes' possessions out of Lupin's hands.

"No! A thousand curses on you, John Phoenix and friends! Some day, I will steal from you all!" cried Lupin and he used a smoke bomb to escape.
