Summary: Susato's been kidnapped by the elusive thief Arsène Lupin and she must slip through his powerful grasp!

*Chapter 1*: Arsène Lupin VS Susato Mikotoba

Susato was in the attic of 221B Baker Street sorting through case files, after seeing John Phoenix off as he returned to his own time. Ryunosuke was downstairs sleeping on the couch so she was alone up here.

As she was finishing up, she heard someone running up the stairs. Running like that was quite childish so it would have to be little Iris, or perhaps Mr. Sholmes or even Ryunosuke, so basically anyone that's not her.

She looked over her shoulder and saw her visitor was none other than the dastardly gentleman thief!

"Arsène Lupin is here!" he announced.

"Arsène Lupin! What did you steal now?" said Susato.

"I stole YOU, Susato!" shouted Lupin and he grabbed her and flew out the window! He ran all the way to his new hideout, which was in the middle of the vastest desert in the United Kingdom. He threw Susato into a small, empty room.

"Okay, now wait there and don't leave," said Lupin and he slammed the door shut.

Susato tried to open the door, but it was locked. Although it was dark, she already knew there was nothing she could use in this cramped room to escape, except for herself.

That's when she remembered something important. Susato stuck her hand into her pockets and pulled out Iris' cat-flap maker. She was holding onto it for its safety, but now it was going to secure her own safety.

Susato pressed the cat door maker against the door and made dozens of cat-flaps, all next to each other. The cat-flaps eventually formed one big door that she could just about fit through.

"Good thing Iris got this thing back," Susato thought as she stepped through the cat-flaps and had escaped from the room.

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING?!" shouted Lupin. "I TOLD YOU NOT TO LEAVE!"

Lupin blocked the exit and took out a giant sword. The sword was so big that he wouldn't have to even move a single step for it to slice through Susato. He got this sword after learning from his mistakes in his battles against Ryunosuke and Iris.

Susato simply stared at the sword with her eyes narrowed doubtfully.

"You may think of me as a coward but you will stop doing that in a second because you shall be DEAD!" said Lupin, and he held the sword up high, ready to swing, but then he got visibly tired and collapsed, dropping the colossal sword over himself!

Susato giggled, completely unsurprised, and went home.
