Summary: John Phoenix recovers the red box stolen from Dunning Smith at long last!

Chapter 1*: John Phoenix and the Red Box

Kyle Hyde and Louis DeNonno returned to their rowboat where John Phoenix was waiting for them.

"John Phoenix where were you?" said Kyle.

"Isn't it obvious? I was using a payphone. I used it to tell Dylan where the thief who stole his teddy bear had gone. I knew that he'd be a powerful ally if he had a reason to work with us, you see."

"Wowwww you're so smart, John Phoenix," said Louie. "So Hyde, time to bring this back to old man Dunning, ya dig?"

"Yeah."

So Kyle and Louie rowed the boat back to the main land and they got in the car to go back to Hotel Dusk. It was dusk when they got there.

"Welcome ta my slice'a heaven," said Dunning.

"Oh, that's okay, Dunning. We're just here to return this box," said Kyle.

"What in Sam Hill are ya babblin' about, I already got my box back!" said Dunning. "Sides, that thing don't look nothing like it!"

"What? You're making a mistake, that box you got is-"

"Hyde what in tarnation is that supposed ta mean, are ya sayin' I'm goin' senile? Do I look that old to you? Yer messed up, Hyde!"

"Wait, Dunning-"

"Don't ya "wait, Dunning" me, boy! Get outta my hotel!"

Dunning grabbed Kyle by the collar and threw him out onto the road.

"Damn..." said Kyle.

"Hey, wait a second," said John Phoenix now that he was seeing the box for the first time. He opened it and realized it was actually a music box, and a priceless artefact from thousands of years ago! That must have been why Nile was after it, and what Dylan stole in the first place.

"But then where did the actual red box go?" said Louie.

Kyle tried to stand up and that's when he noticed there was something in his pocket. He stuck his hand inside it and pulled out a small, red square object.

"Oh, sorry guys," Kyle rubbed the back of his head in shame. "I guess I looked in the wrong pocket."

John Phoenix glared at Kyle.

"OBJECTION!"
